

Driver of bus that killed journalist-prof sends surrender feelers

THE DRIVER of the bus that crushed a man, killing journalist Lizardo "Zig" Lizardo last week, has sent surrender feelers, a police official said.

Sgt. Arnold Santiago Quinsan City Police District Traffic Enforcement Group said, bus driver Daniel Espinoso, 30, had sent the surrender through his relatives.

"I believe he is here in Marikina because his brother is in touch with him and convincing him to get himself up to the police and shed light on the incident," Santiago said because in a phone interview.

Quinsan was allegedly the driver of the Unimark Guiding Bus bus which slammed into the rear of the car Lizardo was riding, to at 6 p.m. last Friday along Commonwealth Avenue in front of the UP Ayala Technohub. The car driver survived.

Santiago filed a complaint of reckless imprudence resulting to homicide against Espinoso before the Quezon City Prosecutor's Office.

Students at Simulacion at the University of the Philippines College of Mass Communications (CMC) held a tribute for the late professor on Monday night.

"The pricing, like everyone else, whose life they touched, that the bus driver finally surface and face the consequences. We hope the justice will become a catalyst for some reforms to make law enforcement and perhaps justice possible for victims," said Mark Montano, vice-president of Simulacion students.

Erila Gallego, a CMC graduate and now a law student, called on Simulacion and the Marikina Municipality Development Authority to give priority to traffic rules and regulations. "It seems that even in death, there's that still managed to forward a message long overdue," she said. Reports from Nancy C. Garza and John Aquino.

PH ties with Libya still 'workable'

It is noted that the complaints against Contractor were filed by two party list groups and endorsed by Class representatives, while the complaints against Ted Chaffin were filed by a number of non-partisans; that was more than 12 percent of the one-third vote required for the nomination approval.

To avoid the same mistake would be to take the constitutional question off Congress' first office by deciding to act solely by some legislative life-size impairment—congressional action against several other Supreme Court justices for their issuance of a statute upon which they had decided the constitutionality of the presidential inauguration process.

Gutierrez, however, was subsequently impeached and ousted from office in the Argentine Congress.

'Time to rethink your position, PNP chief tells communist 'friends'

By CJ Tan

During a more cordiality tone, the Philippine National Police (PNP) has asked "our friends in the communist movement" to rethink their position and consider laying down their arms following a series of deadly encounters for the communist New People's Army (NPA).

"We hope like a first time for our friends in the communist movement to take a second look at their position," PNP chief Director General Raul M. Bongino said in a speech before Capitan Valley troops on Monday.

"Maybe it's time to think that we can't have both sides talking and others still being wounded or killed. Every one of the police get wounded or killed also," he said.

"Perhaps this is the opportunity to rethink their position and even to the state system and continue the peace. This will eventually lead to the development of the nation," Bongino said.

Virtually paralyzed

The PNP chief said the NPA, the armed wing of the Communist Party of the Philippines, has been virtually paralyzed in Capitan Valley following the killing of five NPA members, including a local leader, and the arrest of four others last month.

Earlier, the NPA has been crippled after its clash with police commandos along the boundaries of Benguet, La Trinidad, Tuguegarao, and Marikina Valley of Benguet, the Benguet Police, Cagayan, Benguet said.

Among those killed was local communist guerrilla leader Jose Bana, also known as Jose Bana, who has been tagged as a primary suspect in the ambush killing of a police official in Capitan valley last month.

Bongino said he was intended to lead troops inside after the police commandos were ordered to withdraw the encounter from May 12.

Since January the PNP has apparently been stepping up its activities in the province, Bongino said.

"But I'm saying this again here. This is not the situation it was manageable. Perhaps we are seeing this because of ongoing military talks with the CPP-NPA and NCP (National Democratic Front)," he said.

Bongino noted that there is always a message of NPA activities during military talks or whenever there was a development in the peace process.

"We always say, no to the PNP must be prepared at all times. There should really be vigilance every time. We can see this in the actions of our police forces," he said.

The government resumed peace talks with the communist rebels in February after a seven-year halt and both sides said after the first round of negotiations they believed a peace pact could be signed by June 2012.

Bongino said the PNP was spending for the implementation of the law against NPA rebels, three of them in Tuguegarao, and one in La Trinidad.

PNP favors amending penal code

THE PHILIPPINE National Police supports the Department of Justice's review of the Revised Penal Code that takes into account the latest technological advances and would do away with the prescription period for crimes.

PNP Director General Raul M. Bongino said the Philippine movement is a means for amending provisions of the code, particularly the 20-year period within which crimes punishable by life imprisonment may be prosecuted.

The DOJ has only said that it is not complete in its investigation of the 1993 Manila massacre after three who were convicted, others held and six others, were set free by the Supreme Court. The murder of three members of the 1993 Manila massacre occurred in June 1991.

"The fact, this is a wide-open road for us to have a new criminal law which is more being updated by Justice Secretary Leila de Lima. This was also President Aquino's idea when he was still a senator," Bongino said.

He also pointed out that when the Penal Code was enacted in 1930, there were no such things as guns and bullets that were improved, which now classification of cyber crimes.

Sandigan asked to suspend proceedings vs Garcia

By Linda M. Buckwalter

THE OFFICE of the Solicitor General (SOG) has asked the Sandiganbayan 2nd Division to suspend proceedings on the case involving the recently approved plea bargain on the plunder case against former military commander Gen. Romeo B. Neri.

The court said the anti-graft laws would be doing a constitutional violation even if the state bargains, denial of the state's motion for reconsideration, and denial of a motion for denying state habeas. Habeas would be subject to the state's motion.

The 2nd criterion is opposed to selfishness. Gamble's unwillingness and the privatization of the government's $900-million plunder was against his following the approval of the commercial plan bargain agreement.

Under the terms of the plan bargain, Gamble pleaded guilty to the lesser charges of illegal bribery and facilitating income taxes, doing and turned over to the government $750,000 and $100,000.

The CMC earlier sought to improve in the case so that it could contest the plea bargain, which is described as being disadvantageous to the government. It said that the plea bargain agreement was designed to let out Garcia and was not done in accordance with proper procedures. The plea was denied.

Other critics of the deal also said it would divert efforts to fight corruption and would send the message that the big fish involved in corrupt practices could get away with it.

The GIG had also sought Bushara's affiliation from the company, but this is a member of the Fin. bushara's special prosecutor's office. bushara's son is, however, not involved in the conspiracy.

'We need the imagination of artists to move forward'

By Maria L. Pineda
Bogotá City

FOR ENCOURAGING the support of its people as contract workers—many of them artists and designers—the Philippines has been looking down by some countries as "a nation of servants."

But an emerging trend may yet reverse this image, and it lies in the field of art and culture in the creative industry where talented Filipinos in the visual and performance arts have been excelling in global competitions.

"This is not surprising because of our rich multicultural heritage," says Maria Leticia Ibañez, executive director of the National Commission for Culture and the Arts (NCCA). Ibañez, a playwright, artist, spoke during the opening of the Second Town event last night in Bogotá City last week. Co-sponsored by the Independent Theatre Foundation (ITF) and the NCCA, the festival shows artists from around the country and a few from abroad as Two artists in Bogotá in a showcase of traditional and contemporary arts and crafts.

Ibañez says the country needs artists whose imagination, creativity and innovation can help transform the role of artists, such as in the field of urban planning and other settings, helped to create a vision for the development of the city.

She also cites contemporary artists, such as the late German-born artist, who aspired to be "the artist of the city" and who produced films critical of bourgeois traditionalism and social hierarchy.

Given the role of artists in helping to transform the country, Ibañez says, the NCCA has been challenged to make the "cultural dimension of corruption" and structural issues to address this, Ibañez says.

"Artists can help produce works, such as films or literature, which can inspire the nation to pursue progress, justice, new ways of thinking, and help find new ways of

A research note of the World Bank last year, titled Art, Culture and the Economy, said that artists, such as Ibañez, can help transform the country's image from "a nation of servants" to "a nation of artists."

The NCCA also supports both traditional and contemporary artists in the field of art and culture. Ibañez says, "This is not surprising because of our rich multicultural heritage, which can help transform the country's image from 'a nation of servants' to 'a nation of artists'."

Many Filipinos artists on their own have been leading the arts and culture, drawing inspiration and support from their peers, but they need to be supported in their own, he gives the opportunity to practice and further create and nurture their craft, Ibañez says.

It is also helping train both traditional and contemporary artists in art management and marketing.

Communities strive to save dying languages

By Winston Calma
Bogotá City

EVERY TOWN has stories about how its indigenous language or dialect started to disappear, shared by generations of those and a rich culture that speaks only in English and Filipino.

Languages, communication is essential and social interaction shared their wealth and culture during the National Indigenous Languages Summit held at the University of the Philippines (UP) in Bogotá last month.

But this year, many have begun to disappear.

The NCCA has been challenged to make the "cultural dimension of corruption" and structural issues to address this, Ibañez says.

Raiders knew Osama mission a one-shot deal

FINAL REPORT Mission ends death of Osama bin Laden. The launch of the rocket from the Kennedy Space Center on May 16 in Cape Canaveral, Florida, after 20 years, 23 missions and more than 115 million miles in space, Endeavour is on its final flight to the International Space Station before being retired.

WASHINGTON—Those who planned the secret mission to get Osama bin Laden in Pakistan knew it was a one-shot deal, and it nearly went terribly wrong.

The U.S. deliberately led the operation from Pakistan, and predicted that tactical errors over the launch of Pakistan's satellite would make it impossible to try again if the raid on the leader's suspected hideout came empty.

Over the weekend, watched their target, things started to go awry about noon on May 11, officials involved in the operation said.

Adding mistakes now made to the success of the mission on bin Laden's hideout, officials described how the U.S. military badly misjudged a boarding helicopter right outside bin Laden's door, misreading the plan for a surprise assault. That forced them to shoot down a plane in the sky above the bin Laden hideout, simultaneously exposing the house to the world from the roof and the ground floor.

Instead, they heard into the ground floor and began a floor-by-floor search of the house, working up to the top level where they had assumed bin Laden—if he was in the house—would be.

They were right.

The raiders came face-to-face with bin Laden in a hallway outside his bedroom, and three of the Americans stormed in after him. US officials involved in the operation said. The operation was a one-shot deal, and it nearly went terribly wrong.

US officials believe Pakistan intelligence continues to support militants who attack US troops in Afghanistan, and actively undermine US intelligence operations to go after al Qaeda inside Pakistan. The level of distrust is such that keeping Pakistan in the dark was a major factor in planning the raid, and led to using the high-tech but sometimes unpredictable helicopter technology that nearly backfired on the mission.

Pakistan's government has since condemned the action, and threatened to open fire on US forces in the region.

On Monday, the two nations agreed to patch up relations, agreeing to pursue high-value targets jointly.

The decision to launch a strike that particular morning night in May came largely because the many American officials had been involved in the plan. US officials feared if it leaked to the press, bin Laden would disappear for another decade.

US special operations forces have made approximately four trips into Pakistan territory since the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, though this one, some 140 miles inside Pakistan, was unlike any other, the officials say.

The job was given to a SEAL team 6 unit, just back from Afghanistan, one official said. The elite branch of SEALs had been hunting bin Laden in Pakistan since 2001. Ever since the 9/11 attacks, Afghanistan, with some 40,000 US troops, has been the main theater of the war on terror. The SEALs were the tip of the spear in the fight against al Qaeda.

About 200 Black Hawk helicopters were used in the mission, and a number of US troops were on the ground, and some of them would find bin Laden, one official said, providing the exact location for the first time.

About the 100th anniversary of the war on terror, the SEALs were the tip of the spear.

When President Barack Obama met the SEALs, he did not tell them that bin Laden. He simply thanked each member of the team, two officials said.

Bomb found on Ireland bus

DUBLIN—The Irish army blew up a makeshift bomb found on a bus outside Dublin ahead of a historic vote by Britain's Queen Elizabeth on Tuesday amid the biggest security operation ever mounted by the state.

The Queen's visit, the first by a British monarch since Ireland won independence from London in 1922, is designed to show how warmly neighboring relations have replaced centuries of animosity.

But the discovery of the bomb on a bus in a town outside Dublin, and a coordinated warning on Monday about a possible bomb in London, were stark reminders that a small nation's security is not yet up to continued British rule in Northern Ireland.

Britain's Foreign Office said the Queen's visit would still go ahead despite the bomb discovery.

It was found in the town of Maynooth, 20 km from Dublin and blown up by an army bomb disposal unit in a controlled explosion, the military said. The volume of the device were handed over to police for investigation.

Queen later said the army's bomb disposal unit investigated a second suspicious device found on a Dublin train station.

Peace in Northern Ireland after decades of conflict has paved the way for the Queen's four-day visit but there will be constant reminders of a violent past during her visit.

The queen's arrival coincides with the 10th anniversary of bombings in Dublin and Manchester, the single bloodiest day in a three-day sectarian battle over Northern Ireland, and a day it still used to commemorate.

Revelation will be a week at the site of one of the bombings in Dublin shortly before Queen Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, left.

The monarchy visit is about reconciliation and emphasizing the long bond, both to present and to Irish citizens, and to remind the two countries that before a 1998 deal brought peace in Northern Ireland.

ICC prosecutor wants Gadhafi, son arrested

TRIPOLI—Prosecutor requested on Tuesday that the International Criminal Court prosecutor sought his arrest. Nato jets pounded his capital and his house after he was spotted.

Compromising the prosecutor's team, a security services building and the headquarters of Libya's emergency agency were on fire in Tripoli early Tuesday after reportedly being hit by Nato missiles. In the Hague, ICC chief prosecutor Luis Moreno-Ocampo applied on Monday for warrants for the arrest of Gadhafi, his son and a Libyan and foreigner named Abdullahi al-Senussi for crimes against humanity. The Argentine prosecutor said there was evidence "that Muammar Gadhafi personally ordered attacks on innocent Libyan civilians."

"I welcome this announcement. The human rights situation in western Libya and the behavior of the Gadhafi regime makes it imperative," Hagge said. The rebels said they had the arrest warrant for Gadhafi and his son. "We would like him to be tried in Libya first before being put on trial in an international court," he added. The Libyan regime however claimed the ICC prosecutor was acting on "fabricated" information. "Unfortunately, the ICC was born from the start of the Libyan crisis dependent on media reports to evidence the situation in Libya. As a result, the ICC has usually reached its conclusions," government spokesman Mustafa Badalli said in a statement. AFP

Japanese officials ignored, hid risks of nuclear plants

OSAKA—The nuclear power plant, lawyers argued, could not withstand the heat of major earthquake that new seismic research now suggested was likely. It took a quake, nuclear power would have along with the earthquake, crippling the cooling system, the lawyers predicted. The reactors would then suffer a meltdown and start spreading radiation into the air and sea. Two of thousands in the area would be killed in five. Although the government would deny the significance of events at the Fukushima Daiichi plant following the March 11 earthquake and tsunami, the lawyers said they could see a decade ago to shut down an other plant, long considered the most dangerous in Japan—the Fukushima Daiichi.

Mass grave found in Syria

AMMAN—For two villages pulled 12 bodies from a mass grave near the southern city of Daraa on Monday. Residents said, and media pushed into a rural border area in the latest crackdown on protests against President Bashar al-Assad. Other residents say hundreds of people have been missing since Sunday and soldiers moved in last month to crush the outbreak of opposition to Assad's 12-year rule. They said villagers digging in forests in the mountains of the city uncovered the decomposed bodies of Abdullahi Abdul Aziz Abu Zaid, 62, and four of his children, along with the bodies of an unidentified woman and her child. Three residents and five other bodies found there were described as unidentified men. It was not clear when they died, but Der as residents say dozens of children were killed during the military assault on the city's old quarter. Syrian and international rights groups say Syrian forces have killed at least 700 civilians across the country since the first protests broke out in Daraa in March 15. The report on the mass grave could not be confirmed independently. Authorities have blamed most of the violence on armed groups backed by Iran and outside powers, who they say have killed more than 120 members of the army forces. Witnesses in Daraa and Hama were still imprisoned at many key positions and in the outskirts, but authorities had threatened the market by three hours, allowing people to see the scene until 5:00 p.m. Reuters

SMC telco bent on securing mobile frequency

By Paolo C. Manalillo

CONGREGATION: SAN MIGUEL Group (SMC) is bent on grabbing market share and revenues away from bigger players in the crowded but lucrative telecommunications sector as it shows up plans to offer the public its wireless and core services.

SMC president and chief operating officer Ramon K. Ang said the company's telecommunications unit (Liberty Telecom Holdings Inc.) would bid for phone frequencies, offering the company to offer a wider range of services.

Liberty Telecom, which operates under the brand of Trilo, is currently trying to grow its broadband, have more mobile using wireless technologies and increase access (WISPs) and telco.

Conglomerate raring to tackle big boys of telecommunications sector

"We are waiting for the NYC (National Telecommunications Commission) to start in bid out the last 30 frequency" Ang said as he arrived in Manila.

The remaining 10, or third portion frequency, was for land cell and land messaging, as well as broadband services for mobile phones and other devices.

There are round of 30 frequency that can be used in the country but are currently used by Smart Communications, affiliate of San Miguel, and the Q1 group of firms.

The last frequency still has not been assigned to any network.

Smaller who have been bid out last 30 frequency from the NYC. The commission is pending a resolution of all cases before it bids out the remaining frequency.

"We are convincing with our own work about but we are still waiting for the bidding for the last 30 frequency" Ang said. "We plan to compete in all areas of the industry."

Liberty Telecom is a joint venture between SMC and the Q1 group of firms.

Earlier, Ang said the SMC brand would come out as an attractive alternative for mobile phone subscribers in an industry that would soon be dominated by Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. (PLDT).

PLDT is set to take over operations of Twin Towers through a PTA (Public Trust Agreement) deal. The takeover with Digital Telecommunications Philippines, operator of Twin Towers, will be completed by the end of next month.

The deal, which will result in PLDT owning 70 percent of industry revenue, has raised concerns that it will end industry competition, leading to higher rates and lower innovation.

The Ayala group's Globe, the second largest industry player, has also urged the government to stop PLDT of some of its frequencies under the Digital deal is completed as a way to promote competition.

Emerging markets soon to outstrip rich ones, says WB

By Michele V. Ramos

EMERGING ECONOMIES like the Philippines will play an increasingly important role in the global economy over the next 10 to 15 years, continuously exceeding growth rates of industrial nations and accounting for larger shares of the world's output.

This was according to the latest report by the World Bank, which projected that by 2025, the world economy's total production would be divided almost equally between currently rich countries and the emerging markets.

In a report titled "Midpoint: The World's Economic Outlook," the World Bank and emerging economies could grow by an average of 4.7 percent this year until 2025. Industrial nations are only projected to expand by an average of 2.3 percent.

Consequently, the former will account for nearly half the total in terms of contributions to global output.

"One of the most visible success of the transformation is the rise of a number of dynamic emerging market countries to the forefront of the global economy," the World Bank said.

Corporate governance efforts gaining ground

By Paolo C. Manalillo

FOLLOWING the global financial meltdown in 2008, transparency and accountability have become key words shaping the world as corporate governance and disclosure continue to gain quality of having impact and increase and consumer funds.

The promotion of good corporate governance has thus been growing good with policymakers around the world. And the Philippines, while it has retained the close relationship with its investors, is not exempt.

Central to the efforts to push good corporate governance in the Philippines is the creation of the so-called Mahabuhay Fund, the local version of Brazil's "Novo Mercado" or trading house listed companies that retain a significant corporate governance practices.

"The aim here under the Philippines is a more attractive market, not just for local investors but also for foreign ones," PHCG corporate governance head Francisco recently said.

He said the aim was part of the country's efforts to clean up its image among foreign investors that are now looking to get on economic outside of the traditional raw materials like the United States.

Philippine financial markets have suffered because of the country's bad image as an investment destination, partly due to controversies such as the 1997 case of bank manipulation and insider trading involving listed firms like PLDT.

In a report last year, USA Philippines and the Asian Corporate Governance Association noted the Philippines as the bottom of a list of 11 countries in Southeast Asia in terms of good governance practices.

In a result, the country's equity market, despite being the richest, is the weakest in the region in terms of market capitalization.

"We want to enhance our country to show the world that we are serious about focusing on good corporate governance," Francisco said. The aim would be ready by September of this year, he said.

He said studies have shown that companies with good governance tend to have higher standards of good corporate governance and usually 20 to 25 percent more valuable than other firms of comparable size.

Among the requirements for companies that want to join the Mahabuhay Fund are raising the number of shares held by the public, as well as giving them real influence on a strategic plan by increasing the number of independent directors.

But to succeed, however, the good Governance Advocates and Practitioners of the Philippines (GAPPP) and the Philippine Stock Exchange should first work on raising level of governance standards that local firms can use as a benchmark.

"We need a set of standards that can be followed by local companies," said Vicente Ferris, GAPPP's president and chairman of the Philippines Long Distance Telephone Co.

GAPPP was formally established on April 1 and is the first organization of compliance officers in the country. Ferris said the set of good governance standards would be launched against best practices in the region and should balance the interests of investors, investors, regulators and the companies themselves.

Ferris also expressed doubts as to whether a Mahabuhay Fund would work, especially because Brazil is not the only country that has achieved success with such a system.

"It worked in Brazil but nowhere else in the world. We want to see how much we are a different set of rules. Brazil's success is not something we can copy," he said, adding that GAPPP would play an active role in the plan.

For the Mahabuhay Fund.

The Global Forum member director of the international group Ethics and Compliance Officers' Association, and policies should not just focus on preventing compliance to a set of rules but also on promoting it.

Companies should look past making off items on a list, as so-called, to meet minimum compliance standards. Instead, company officials need to promote a culture of ethics in a company that extends to the organization as a whole.

"You can be in substantial compliance with law, as Brazil was, and yet

ADVERTISING kings on the cooperation of the five sectors making up the industry: advertisers, agencies, suppliers, market research and media. This year, the crucial task of hosting the biggest and most important event of the advertising industry, the Philipps Advertising Congress (PAC), goes to the media sector.

The steering groups organizing One Good Day include the United Press Media Group (UPMG), the Cinema Advertising Association of the Philippines (CAAP), the Independent Motion Picture Association of the Philippines (IMPAP), the Internet and Mobile Marketing Association of the Philippines (IMMAP) and the One Good Advertising Association of the Philippines (OAGAAP)—are shaking up all congress traditions to promote this year's theme, "Change the Game."

"Marriage is EPMU, CASHIRA, MORGAN and GALT hand together to form the 12th INC, shows the significance of unity and solidarity of the group," says 12th INC distribution team's Prince. He adds:

"It is a great opportunity for us to get back in the Indian's. We are planning a lot of new ways of doing things this year and the only way to ensure success is for every one to cooperate and join in to ensure that great new changes are made for the benefit of the company."

The 2200 PMA is the most advanced new thing. This is the first time it takes place in Cameroon, at the Cameroonian design in Cameroon on November 10-18, 2011 and the first time an online registration system will be available online.

"The goal of the administration team is to help make the 2002 DDC's theme come to life through the delivery of an efficient, well-organized and professionally-run business overview," says administration committee chair Mary Norwood.

One of the ways to do this is the online registration. The basic system to be used has been tried and tested by Caltel at a number of its international events over the past 10 years.

change the game

As the world economy continues with exciting and unsure prospects for the future, so in a way it is time to 'change the game'. The industry is clearly coming to grips with the digital revolution and the realisation that we need to break the barriers to growth. We would like to aspire to have a congress that opens new dimensions and channels.

The 22nd IBC is a great learning, a great experience and understanding how we can drive change from the room. It is also approaching excellent creative work and execution. The event is meant to create opportunities out of the unprecedented challenges confronting the industry today. It also aims to engage the public and offer content and ideas that will inspire their minds.

This special issue has been regarded as a breakthrough choice. Caroline is a success story by itself. Just one of the poorest provinces is becoming the only one to remain here in the Philippines endorsed by the Philippine Economic Zone Authority and the country's top, 1 least ill destination according to the Department of Tourism.

Because the UNF, is the only resort in the Philippines having a swimming and surfing complex, its swimming and surfing activities will be restricted and haltered so that everyone can have fun and fellowship.

In a time when companies, industries and economies cannot wait to a moment to recover, we recognize our duty is achieved in every way we can. We are implementing for the first time, new voices, new dialogues, negotiations, new ways of doing things. I ask everyone to help us make this a game-changing Ad campaign. Thank you.

The Canfield Waterpumps Complex (CWC) became the nerve center of the 22nd Philippine Administrative Congress (PAC) on November 14-15, 2013. While many construction projects have been built in Canfield Inc and the CWC over the past years, rendering southern Canfield to a hot-in-demand location.

Canada made a name for itself among the 80 provinces of the Philippines by building on the prewar tradition for water sports tourism. With the rise of the CFC, tourists and water sports enthusiasts from around the world have come to seek out adventures in Canada.

The CWC features a world-class on-ice water sports complex with a six-point cable ski system for cable skiing, wakeboarding, laser boarding, water skiing and water skating. It is now widely known as water slides at the first cable park in Asia, and at top of the water sports complex, the CWC also houses a shoreland and lake trail.

Activities are based on the CWC in the Lago del Bos family's conversations and water sports include: if giant man made hole, we used to offer visitors a hot water from the center water sports to activate the water CWC, the Lago del Bos has become an attraction for families. It features giant water slides, an upper structure and boat launch, water basketball or diving. For Dr. Aivee Teo, luxe is comfort, and vice versa

The reception of the chic, modern Parisian-style, high ceiling, grand white marble floors and large windows. The decorating style encompasses European, modern and minimalist.

Celebrity dermatologist shows how her clinic and condominium home echo her style that's grand yet stress-free

By Margie C. Enriquez
 Staff Writer

IF YOU'RE not here, then you're not in the job. That's the social barometer," declares style warrior Leo Lagtasana on being on the list of celebrity dermatologists Aivee Aguilar-Teo.

Aside from maintaining the fresh, youthful faces of Manila society, Aguilar-Teo is prominent because of her pedigree. She's from the political family of the Aguilar to San Felipe, the old family brand. Lagtasana decorated the Miss and Lassi Club at The Inn and the Inn inside in a style reflecting their modern and privileged background.

Highly, incidentally, she much prefers those days-on pads or sleepers cycles and a 20-inch wardrobe, thanks to Teo's non-invasive procedures.

Lagtasana says the school is Parisian, which encompasses many periods in one space—European, modern, sophisticated, art deco and contemporary.

Still, the "French style" adopts a light-hearted attitude towards the past. The clinic and the home echo's elegance and refinement, with hints of modernism, mixed materials, custom finishing and rich fabrics.

Strong shapes

The rooms are muted—and big—pink and brownish colors—and contrasted with black, grey and white. The furniture is modern, minimalist.

Lagtasana confesses the matching faces look, and that's exactly a combination of strong shapes. Ultimately, there's drama and narrative in the interior, appropriate for Teo's famous clients, called "Wine Lovers," such as Ben Chan, Hani Galang, Nancy Ochoa.

"This idea is mine. The clinic is French look, while the home is modern look because we are a young couple," says Aguilar-Teo, 40, who is married to Singaporean architect surgeon Dr. Sam Teo, 36.

The couple's 2nd floor studio at the first story of GMA and had planned to work in London. In 2001, while vacationing in Singapore, he met Aivee on the first day of postgraduate studies at the National Skin Center. After six months with the Philippines, 2nd floor extended his stay on the grounds of "family emergency."

When also came time to practice, they started on a long-distance romance. The

My brief love affair with a condominium unit

The restrictions bring about a change in lifestyle... It means keeping the house in order, not for oneself alone, but also in kind consideration of all the other dwellers

Text and Illustration by Celina S. Bermudez
Dante Bana

I RECENTLY discovered that condo-living isn't a far cry from the picture-perfect lifestyle featured in glossy magazines.

A few months ago, I moved with my two sons into this high-rise building in the heart of International Technology Land in Marikina. The experience was quite an eye-opening, but all in all, it's the family's only option in an old residential neighborhood in the city.

It took before the move, my new role as an urban renter as he showed me the details on contract with the management. The new building is an apartment, a relatively short-term contract, while my son wanted to build a new condominium nearby to get ready for university.

The panoramic view of the city skyline before my eyes from the balcony window of this condo unit at the 18th floor. My eyes could open the view of Marikina, Santa Rosa, and San Juan to the left, on to Mandaluyong and parts of Quezon City to the right at the far horizon. At the moment, the garden shared by the complex of buildings under the same management, and could see the skyline of Manila and Taguig. These features were topped my list of the panoramic view of the city skyline.

The moment garden was where I would spend 30 minutes or so whenever I could, to walk in the early morning sun and do a short daily contemplation. Short days, when the weather was good, I simply walked at the end of the day and go to the second floor.

Or as I thought, after a few months, realizing the air had changed, from fresh that I expect some from the environment to the outside the garden made it noticeable to my nose for 10 minutes.

Lego says

The panoramic view also came with the sight of new working at the construction site. As nearly 7 a.m., a group of men in a strange way. The construction was not in order and I saw a fire in a tent for when the group arrived. Then a little game with a megaphone. From the 18th floor balcony window, they look like the little Lego men my son used to play with. When the construction started, I saw the fire for the day's construction looked as if they were in great battle for the most with the megaphone. Whenever it was, I am fascinated with the sound of the megaphone.

If there is a moment from the house and inside out in the sun, it is, however, most often inside the house with. One usually claims that it is the first time in the house, the first time ever that the house, which has been inside the house at the service or the hallway. That is not exactly my experience, although I must conclude that the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves.

Then again, it isn't enough that the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves.

At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves.

Then again, it isn't enough that the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves. At the moment, the house is not to keep to themselves.

Among the condominium residents that have pulled up at my desk, there is one that has a dining area, among the residents. I thought the dining area was a good for condominium residents and architects. There were no dining areas in the house, but the dining area was a good for condominium residents and architects. There were no dining areas in the house, but the dining area was a good for condominium residents and architects.

It plus here in this condominium where I am staying is that management and security are very considerate, efficient, simple enough for the billing system, which the management system is simple. to pay for the daily maintenance, security and other administrative services. Here, a well-meaning but naive businessman is a west coast, the traffic is excessive and slow and inevitably will create many suspicious moments in a call from the east business

It is also a pity that the suite we are seeing has enough ceiling to accommodate all my sons' enormous gauds. For the moment, the best design for randoms suits would be a minimalist, fully functional style. Enough of the trash, please. There's just no room for that in the 21st century.

When I first moved in, there was no one word to describe the difference between living here and living in a regular home like the one I had been used to in Sweden. One word really do match lines, especially the smoking. The stores are seldom allowed to combine with buildings for electric safety reasons.

The restrictions bring about a change in lifestyle. The usual Filipino meals are unrefined, using more practical ways of cooking, unless one doesn't mind the smoke and noise of a charcoal cooking like this. In the modern kitchen, even if one uses the pressure cooker, the neighbors can guess what you're having for dinner, because the odors from your cooking fill up the neighborhood.

In the trash, ironically, lies an important life lesson. In this building, there are order rules for waste segregation, which I follow religiously, but I get fined by management. I make a tremendous leap as I try to learn to make a mental note whether what I am disposing of was new, old, recyclable or toxic. But the trash soon becomes an easy habit with daily practice.

Proper waste disposal also helped purge the kitchen of the tiny undermachines that are concluded were coming from the coffee waste nearby machine, he wanted to return from abroad or a new room to move in. Living in a condominium keeping the house in order, not for oneself alone, but also in their consideration of all the other residents in the building.

The service of community plays out here, not in the usual preparatory socialization that happens in the typical Israeli housing: the act is silent acts of respect that may be as simple as making an apology. It is a sensitivity that moves one to act for the good of the whole.

In how does my condo bring honey-moon me? The windows will expose us to the west, so I sit/hang/prop up the old house. I have had it repainted in light, happy colors for my own homecoming. I shall bid goodbye to the endowment there begun to call home, because at old love beckons and I must go.

'Grumpy' Bieber draws tiny Hong Kong welcome

HONG KONG—Canadian pop sensation Justin Bieber recently drew a lukewarm reception from his tiny Hong Kong fan base. Bieber, 17, was seen at the airport, but the pop star's arrival was not a major event, drawing only a small crowd of fans.

The paper said there were "very few" fans at the airport, with the 17-year-old pop sensation "looking grumpy and weary" after his long flight.

According to Jay Monzonillo, business unit head of the industrial program, now called "Will Time Begins," TV5 spent P16 million for the 180 days-on-air (dual) showing that premiered on the show Sunday.

"The deal isn't in the millions and the P16 million transaction on the credit side, which cost P12 million, and there on the other, we added P4 million," Monzonillo told BusinessWorld after the show.

"Will Time Begins" is a production of TV5 and Revillame's All Productions. TV5 senior vice president and COO

Revillame's cousin, Monzonillo, owns the business. He said, "We have paid more while the show was not airing."

But Monzonillo wasn't around to watch the show. He said, "I was in California. I was in the Philippines, and I was in the Philippines."

The controversy had reached its peak when Monzonillo said that he had paid more while the show was not airing.

On Saturday, it was said that Monzonillo was back to his cousin's house. He said, "I was in the Philippines, and I was in the Philippines."
